DEMOCRATIC PRINCIPLES AND MEASURES.

A strict construction of the Constitution, and no assumption of doubtful powers. A Diplomacy asking for nothing but what is clearly right and submitting to nothing wrong. No connexion between the government and banks.

An ad valorem revenue tariff. No public debt, either by the General Government or by the States, except for objects of urgent necessity.

No assumption by the General Government of the debts of the States, either directly or indirectly, by a distribution of the proceeds of the public lands. No extensive system of Internal Improvement by the General Government or by the States. A constitutional barrier against improvident State loans.

The honest payment of our debts and the sacred preservation of the public faith. A gradual return from a paper credit system.

No grants of exclusive charters and privileges by special legislation to banks. No swindling corporations. No connexion between Church and State.

A preference for Democrats over Whigs for every Acquiescence in the rule of the majority in all cases of party discipline.

No proscription for honest opinions. Fostering aid to public education. A "progressive" reformation of all abuses.

Good Manners.

We know a young man, slow, sullen, heavybrowed and ungracious, who, whenever you speak to him, answers as if it were an effort to be even decently civil; and who, moreover, seems to be quite content, and even proud, of his civility. And we lean to the charitable To be drawn in Alexandria, Va., on Saturday, February 10, 1849 side so far as to think this is nothing more than a bad habit of his, which has insensibly fastened upon him; and that he goes through the world-a world of mutual dependencelittle aware of the fact that so small a thing as his manners is constantly producing impressions, and fast forming a reputation, such as ten years hence he may regret as the great blunder of his life.

Would it not be well for every young man to remember the truthful anecdote of the rich 20 do 600, 20 do 400. &c. &c. Quaker banker, when asked the secret of his success in life, answered, "Civility, friendcivility!" How much does it cost a man, either old or young, to be truly civil in their intercourse with society? Rather how much does it cost a young man to form this habit, which, if formed, will sit upon him easily, Far more often depends on this little, often despised, civility to the world, than any other single adventitious circumstances by which men rise and fall.
